4th of July

Special Detail Reminder

The Beach Patrol is in need of several SRTs to work a special detail on July 3rd and 4th. If you are interested in Boat Operator, Day Security, Lagoon Guard, or Perimeter Security, see Lt. Stone.

End of Day Procedure

All stands are required to be pulled back far enough so that at a high tide they will not be in the water and that it will be difficult for vandals to push the stands into the ocean. Once pulled back ALL stands must be laid down (not pushed over) on their side.

OCBP Question-of-the-Week for The Worcester County Times

Last Week's Question: I heard a lifeguard blowing his whistle and, when I looked toward him, he seemed to be waving flags at me, but I didn't understand what he was doing. There were people out in the water a lot farther than I was. Why would he want me to come in?

The members of the Ocean City Beach Patrol are trained to spot rip currents and many other hazards in the ocean that may cause a threat to the safety of swimmers. They are organized into crews of surf rescue technicians (SRT's), with each crew responsible for guarding a particular section of beach. These crews do not rotate or change areas. While the same guard may not be on the same stand every day, a guard who knows that area will be on the stand. One of the primary tasks of an SRT is to try to move swimmers away from dangerous areas before they become panicked or tired. Guards blow their whistles in the direction of the swimmers at risk and, after getting their attention; they try to direct the swimmers to a safe area. In this way, the SRT's are just like police officers directing traffic. They use one arm to point swimmers in a direction, and the other is used in some form of circular motion to encourage them to keep moving. Guards will continue the rotation motion until everyone is out of the hazardous area. Many times we need to move people just a few feet, but other times we have to move them 5-15 yards. Sometimes swimmers think that we are trying to talk to them in our flag language (semaphore). We know most people can't read semaphore, just as we understand that most swimmers cannot identify a rip current when they are in one. It only follows naturally that most will not be able to tell when they are out of danger. It is important that swimmers continue moving in the direction that the guard is pointing until the guard stops motioning with the flags. If they stop before they are out of the rip current, they will be pulled farther from shore, quickly tire, and be in need of rescue. Our first priority is to keep all beach patrons safe, but we cannot control the ocean. When hazards exist where people are swimming, it is our job to guide them out of harms way or when necessary to swim out and assist them back to safety. Our job is made easier when we have their patience, understanding and assistance.

Remember, if you hear a whistle take the time to stop what you are doing and look toward the SRT who is attempting to get someone's attention. It may be you and if you need help, wave your arms over your head indicating to the SRT you need their assistance.

This Week's Question: What exactly is an S.R.T.? Are they like pool lifeguards?

SRT stands for surf rescue technician. Ocean/surf rescue is significantly more challenging than pool or lake guarding. The job has far more responsibility and entails much more than a regular lifeguard. Because of the uniqueness of the job's demands, our lifeguards receive specialized testing, training and certifications. Only after they have successfully completed Surf Rescue Academy (much like a police officer or fire fighter) and have passed all certification requirements will they begin safeguarding your family and receive certification as an SRT. The SRT is an important part of the beach environment. They are strong swimmers, familiar with their areas, and are able to respond if someone is in danger. Additionally, every SRT is drug tested, meets annual re-qualification standards, participates in weekly in-service training and is currently certified in First Aid, CPR and use of an Automatic External Defibrillator (AED) and has current information on tides and local events. They also receive training in enforcement of laws and local ordinances, search and recovery as well as perfecting their skills in management of suspected head or neck injuries. It is important that you cooperate with the SRT in the performance of his/her duties.. IMPORTANT: Whenever you hear a whistle blast, even if you don't think it is for you, locate the SRT to see what they may need. Don't be afraid to ask for help and remember to wave your arms when in danger.

To: Butch Arbin

Subject: Thank you!

Butch,

Where do I begin? How do I thank you for something that has brought a feeling of hope to our house? How do I tell you how much I love you and the crew at OCBP? Well I guess I just come right out and say it.....Thank you so much for bringing a smile to my family and hope to our house. I love you and all the guys at OCBP and I have felt the family feeling that I have lost in the past few years.

Having Jesi and Mitch participate in dads' relay was such a healing moment for our house. You have no idea! We have all wondered aimlessly around for the past year with our emotions encircling us and thrashing us around like rag dolls. It has been a horrible experience yet one of growth and self discovery. Being at the beach and watching the boys finally participate in an sporting event together was such a powerful moment. Since Jesi started high school. Mitch couldn't wait to get there so they could compete on the same teams as a tag team force! But cancer had a different idea for my guys and this was the first time they have had the opportunity to be that force that they have been waiting for this past year. We have not all been together in a relaxed atmosphere that cancer could not take from us. The sun, sand, water and love were too strong a force for cancer to grab on to and steal the moment.

Ok, ok.....enough huh?! Seriously, thank you! Mitch was asking all kinds of questions and I heard him talking about wanting to lifeguard. Ha! So I am going to look into a class. Who knows.....you may see him out there trying out in a few years. Jesi was surprised he could make it the distance so he had a milestone accomplished. My mom was smiling even yesterday about the event. She was very pleased and loved seeing Lucky! She needed the boost too! KC enjoyed her time with the boys by swimming with them and laughing. Most of her time with the boys is sitting at home or in the hospital. I know when you initially put this event together in '98 that the mission was to honor Dad. It has always been accomplished but this year it was over the top! It was exactly what Dad would have been honored to have his name attached to and something that he would have held close to his heart.

Butch, thank you.....100gazzillion times.....thank you! Please pass on the thank yous to everyone!
HUGE hugs and kisses!
Kerry :0)
