OCBP Question-of-the-Week for The Worcester County Times

Last Week's Question : : Why do the lifeguards make people leave the beach when it is just thundering or a little bit of lightning?

The Ocean City Beach Patrol is in constant contact with the weather service and is aware of the current weather situation at all times. Many times weather conditions vary from one end of Ocean City to the other. It can be sunny and mild in the south by the boardwalk and lightening and showers just 9 miles north. In fact, there are many documented cases throughout the country of people being hit by lightning while the sun is shining (called a bolt from the blue).

The beach patrol is not only in constant contact with the weather service, but they have constant communication with each other up and down the beach as well. The beach patrol, like other modern emergency services, relies on two-way radio systems. However, they still use two systems that do not rely on any technology: whistle blasts and semaphore. The beach patrol's primary concern is your safety and will clear the beaches if it is not safe. There have been at least 10 documented cases of people who have been struck by lightning while on the beach (not in the water). While vacationing on the beaches in OC you may or may not notice the lifeguards communicating with each other, but please heed their warnings and leave the beach if asked to do so even if you do not see lightening. Due to constant monitoring of the weather and their communication systems, they are aware of dangers that you might not be able to see. A beach is listed as one of the most vulnerable places to be during an electrical storm, according to weather researchers.

To get current information about the beach patrol as well as daily stats and current beach conditions, you can follow the beach patrol on Twitter or "like us" on the Official OCBP Facebook page. We can't wait to be a part of your wonderful experiences in Ocean City, because we are glad you are here, and always remember to "Keep your feet in the sand until the lifeguard's in the stand!"

This Week's Question : I heard a lifeguard blowing his whistle and, when I looked toward him, he seemed to be waving flags at me, but I didn't understand what he was doing. There were people out in the water a lot farther than I was. Why would he want me to come in?

The members of the Ocean City Beach Patrol are trained to spot rip currents and many other hazards in the ocean that may cause a threat to the safety of swimmers. They are organized into crews of surf rescue technicians (SRT's), with each crew responsible for guarding a particular section of beach. These crews do not rotate or change areas. While the same guard may not be on the same stand every day, a guard who knows that area will be on the stand. One of the primary tasks of an SRT is to try to move swimmers away from dangerous areas before they become panicked or tired. Guards blow their whistles in the direction of the swimmers at risk and, after getting their attention; they try to direct the swimmers to a safe area. In this way, the SRT's are just like police officers directing traffic. They use one arm to point swimmers in a direction, and the other is used in some form of circular motion to encourage them to keep moving. Guards will continue the rotation motion until everyone is out of the hazardous area. Many times we need to move people just a few feet, but other times we have to move them 5-15 yards. Sometimes swimmers think that we are trying to talk to them in our flag language (semaphore). We know most people can't read semaphore, just as we understand that most swimmers cannot identify a rip current when they are in one. It only follows naturally that most will not be able to tell when they are out of danger. It is important that swimmers continue moving in the direction that the guard is pointing until the guard stops motioning with the flags. If they stop before they are out of the rip current, they will be pulled farther from shore, quickly tire, and be in need of rescue. Our first priority is to keep all beach patrons safe, but we cannot control the ocean. When hazards exist where people are swimming, it is our job to guide them out of harms way or when necessary to swim out and assist them back to safety. Our job is made easier when we have their patience, understanding and assistance. Remember, if you hear a whistle take the time to stop what you are doing and look toward the SRT who is attempting to get someone's attention. It may be you and if you need help, wave your arms over your head indicating to the SRT you need their assistance.

To get current information about the beach patrol as well as daily stats and current beach conditions, you can follow us on Twitter or "like us" on our Official OCBP Facebook page. We can't wait to be a part of your wonderful experiences in Ocean City, because we are glad your here, and always remember to "Keep your feet in the sand until the lifeguard's in the stand!"

Subject: Ocean City Life Guards
Importance: High

Dear Mr. Arbin,

Me, my wife and son were on our annual vacation at Ocean City staying on the north shore May 28th – June 4th, as usual it was beautiful weather and very relaxing on the beach. On May 31 my son Nicholas was in the water playing while my wife and I were relaxing on the beach watching him, we were discussing our plans and I looked out at our son, he seemed to be a little to far out so I started walking towards the water and telling him to come back. He kept drifting further out so I did my best to get to him and was wiped out by a wave, when I got up I noticed he was still drifting further out, I looked back at my wife and saw that she was running for the life guard, and all of a sudden about a foot away from me I see a life guard swim past me at about 100 miles an hour. He made it to our son and towed him back in, it seemed to take about 10 minutes due to the waves.

When they got to shore I could see that my son was very scared and embarrassed, the life guard who we only know as Dustin explained to my son that it was not his fault that this happened and told us that he was caught in a cross wave (I think?) and that they are very hard to get out of. He told my son what to do if it happened again, he was a very cool guy and made sure our son was ok and understood. As far as we're concerned, Dustin saved our sons life.

The rest of the week was mostly spent in shallow water. I spent a lot of time watching the life guards, for hours they sit in the heat, pulling people out of the water, always friendly, professional and dedicated. The Ocean City life guards are real hero's, all of them.

I really don't know what else to say but thank God you guys are there.

Sincerely,

Christopher Eandi
