What do the different whistle blasts mean?

While vacationing on the beaches in Ocean City you may notice a surf rescue technician (SRT) blowing his or her whistle. The sound produced by a SRT's whistle tells the surrounding guards as well as beach patrons what is going on. One whistle blast means the lifeguard wants your attention. If you hear the lifeguard blow his whistle you should look at him to see if he is attempting to tell you something whether you are in the water or on the beach. Even if you are "sure" that they are not talking to you, they may see or know something that you do not. The SRT may be indicating that you need to move out of potential danger, such as rip currents, dangerous shore-break or even marine life that we often see in the summer such as whale sightings and dolphin pods. The guard could also be letting you know that you are breaking a rule. Two whistle blasts indicate that the lifeguard has made the decision that they need to leave the stand to intervene in a beach emergency or a water rescue. These two whistle blasts will also initiate the back-up coverage system and will involve SRTs from several surrounding locations. In a severe emergency a lifeguard will blow three whistle blasts, and this is an indication that there is a life and death situation and that they need immediate back up and assistance. Although by today's technology standards, the whistle may seem prehistoric, the response it initiates brings the most up to date communication and life-saving equipment to the scene. Because this signaling device is so critical to our rescue and response system it is the only piece of required uniform other than the SRT's bathing suit. It is always worn and ready to be used both on the beach and in the ocean. Because this is a critical component of our essential job functions, we require that each SRT is capable of hearing and locating whistle blast from 300 meters.

In addition to the whistle, we have two other primary methods of communication among our personnel. We utilize Semaphore for line-of-sight messaging both in the water and on the beach. Although this seems like a throw-back in time, it is fast and efficient and does not rely on an extra piece of equipment. The final method is a state-of-the-art Digital radio system that can communicate not only among Beach Patrol staff but also to other agencies within the Town, state or nationally. Some may ask why we are still using these technologies with so many people now having cell phones and texting. The answer is simple. Our SRT's are not allowed to use or have any personal communication devices powered on while they are working. This is to avoid a potential distraction or the appearance that the lifeguard is not alert.

To get current information about the Beach Patrol as well as daily stats and current beach conditions, you can visit our website at www.ococean.com/ocbp, follow the Beach Patrol on Instagram or "like us" on the Official OCBP Facebook page. We also encourage everyone to check-in with your SRT each day to learn about the conditions on your beach (they can change rapidly) and introduce your family to the SRT, especially children, so they realize this is a safe person who can help them, if they need anything.

Anyone interested in becoming a lifeguard, should call Beach Patrol Headquarters at 410-289-7556.
